3                         (b)(1), the Secretary shall—

4                             (A) not provide the claimant with a state-
5                         ment of the case nor require the claimant to file 6                         a substantive appeal; and

7                             (B) transfer jurisdiction over the express
8                         appeal directly to the Board of Veterans' Ap-9                         peals.

10                         (2) DOCKET.—The Board of Veterans' Appeals 11                         shall—

12                             (A) maintain express appeals on a separate 13                         docket than traditional appeals;

14                             (B) hear express appeals in the order that 15                         the express appeals are received on the express 16                         appeal docket; and

17                             (C) decide not more than one express ap-18                         peal for each four traditional appeals decided.

19                         (3) NEW EVIDENCE.—

20                             (A) If a claimant submits to the Board of 4                 continue the express appeal.

5                 (B) If a claimant withdraws new evidence
6                 pursuant to subparagraph (A)(ii), the Secretary
7                 shall inform the claimant, after the Board de-8                 cides the express appeal, of the ability of the 9                 claimant to use such new evidence as the basis
10                for a petition to reopen the claim or as a sepa-
11                rate claim for an increased rating.

12                 (4) PROHIBITION ON REMAND TO REGIONAL 13                 OFFICE.—If the Board of Veterans' Appeals deter-14                 mines that an express appeal requires additional in-15                 formation, including any medical examination, the 16                 Board shall—

17                     (A) direct the Veterans Benefits Adminis-
18                 tration to take such actions as may be nec-
19                 essary to develop such information;

20                     (B) retain jurisdiction of the express ap-21                 peal without requiring a determination by the 23                 information;

7                         (5) HEARINGS.—Notwithstanding section 7107

9                         erans' Appeals may not provide hearings with re-10                       spect to express appeals. A claimant may request to 11                       hold a hearing pursuant to such section 7107 if the 13                       pursuant to subsection (b)(4).
